

NATIONAL NATIVE TITLE COUNCIL

Who are we?

The National Native Title Council is the non-profit, peak body for the native title sector.

Our members are made up of the Traditional Owners of Australia's lands, waters & resources, and their representative bodies. Through native title and other land-related laws & policies, we advocate for the rights & interests of all First Nations people.

What do we do?

Together with the native title sector, governments & industry, we work to ensure First Nations people have greater decision-making power over their own lands. On behalf of our members, we work with government to improve the native title system, we support industry towards best practice in engaging with First Nations people, and we form partnerships to advance First Nations peoples' rights to self-determination.

Becoming a NNTC member

Did you know NNTC membership is free for all PBCs?

We provide a strong voice for our members at the national level, and we work to elevate the rights and interests of First Nations people while working to improve the native title system.

Stay informed: Our regular consultations with PBC members on matters such as native title compensation, cultural heritage & PBC nation-building reform keep them updated on important developments affecting the sector.

Thrive: We deliver free, personalised workshops for our members to assist them in building and leveraging their PBC as a business. Workshops cover a range of topics like marketing, finance, governance, statutory obligations & more. We also support our members in understanding how to exercise their rights as First Nations.

Create a better system: As a NNTC member, you can collaborate with the sector, share information & help us create a better system. Provide input into our national policy agenda, covering issues like cultural heritage, native title & CATSI reform, economic development models, ethical investment, Closing the Gap, constitutional reform and land, water & tenure reform.
